Hi Crystal,

Yes, as soon as a client discovers she is pregnant again within the one year post-partum eligibility, you should complete all remaining forms for the first pregnancy, and then discharge her using the "Became pregnant before 1 year eligibility" discharge reason. Then immediately re-enroll the client with a new intake assessment.

In terms of how to handle her assessments at this point, I will need her name in order to look her up in the system.

Thanks,

Emily Kraft

Emily,

I received your email regarding the social security numbers. I will be calling you with the ones I have soon.

I have an issue with a client and need your input. One of my clients gave birth on 2/21/16; however, she soon became pregnant again. I spoke to my supervisor and it was decided to keep her in the program for the next pregnancy. She gave birth prematurely on 11/30/16. The issue now is that I was not able to enter the 2nd birthing report. In hindsight I believe we should have discharged her and then re-enrolled her when she found she was pregnant again. She continues to need assistance and we are unsure how to proceed as she is one year postpartum from her first pregnancy.
